9. Description This 2 1/2 story 3 bay by 2 bay building faces south. It is frame covered with white stucco, with a modified gable roof and two decorative gables. Windows are double hung; most have green louvered shutters. A porch extends across 2/3 of the south facade. Bay 3 has a 2 1/2 story bay window with decorative shingled gable. The second story is rectangular, and the first is mitred with decorative trim and pendants. The center entrance is a paneled windowed door with transom. The exterior east chimney is newer; the east stack is closer to the center of the building. The east facade features a decorative gable, 2 doors, and a small porch. The L-shaped house has been made square by a rear addition, which has multipaned grouped windows. There are 4 outbuildings of varying sizes. Inside, there is a center stair with 2 rooms on each side and 1 behind. Details include crown molding, paneled doors, turned balustrades, porcelain doorknobs, and 2 fireplaces.

10. Significance This house is one of a handful of pre-suburbia homes remaining in the old village. It sits on a portion of "Williamsborough Resurveyed", originally purchased in 2 parcels by Thomas Perry during the 1870s. Perry ran the general store in Potomac, and after 1884, the business was continued by his widow Marian and son Edgar. Perry's daughter Cora married John Ball in 1898, and soon after Ball began working as a clerk in the Perry store. In 1903, Marian Perry Sullivan partitioned off 7 acres and conveyed it to her daughter Cora Ball. On that portion of the parcel fronting on River Road, John and Cora Ball had constructed the present house, sometime around 1905. John died in 1935, and Cora continued to live there until her death in 1963. Their son F. Anson Ball and his wife lived there and inherited the house and one acre. This is a one-owner house, hardly changed since early 1900's.

BUILDER/ARCHITECT

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The Ball house, situated in the crossroads community of Potomac, is one of a handful of pre-suburbia homes remaining in the village district. The building sits upon a portion of the tract known as "Williamsborough Resurveyed" originally purchased in two parcels by Thomas Perry during the 1870's.¹ Thomas Perry ran the general store in Potomac, located on the northwest corner of the intersection of Falls and River Road. After Perry's death, in 1884, the business was continued by his son, Edgar, and his widow, Marian Perry, the daughter of Thomas and Marian Perry, Cora Perry, married John Lewis Ball of Tioga County, Pennsylvania, on November 16, 1898, and John Ball, shortly after the wedding, commenced work as a clerk in the Perry store. It is believed that Cora and John Ball lived for a time in the residential section of the store building.

An incident of attempted highway robbery involving John Ball occurred in 1899. As reported by the Sentinel.

John Ball, clerk in Edgar Perry's store at Potomac, this county, was attacked by two negroes in the road near Hunting Hill, on Wednesday night of last week (December 6, 1899). While one man held the horse he was driving, a second one appeared at the side of the wagon and demanded his money. Ball refused the demand and started to drive off. Then the negro at the side of the wagon drew a revolver and fired at him. Ball returned the fire and he believes he shot the man that had hold of the horse. After emptying his revolver he drove hurriedly away. His assailants are still at large.²

On April 29, 1903, Marian Perry Sullivan (who remarried in 1895) partitioned off seven acres of "Williamsborough Resurveyed" and conveyed the same to her daughter, Cora Ball.³ It is on that portion of the parcel fronting on River Road that John and Cora Ball had constructed the present house, sometime around the year 1905. The couple, for some 30 years, occupied the house and, after the death of John Ball in 1935, Cora Ball continued to live in the house along with her son, F. Anson Ball and his wife. Anson Ball constructed and operated a service station and garage in Potomac, located on Falls Road (the present Dunham's Garage). Cora Ball died on September 29, 1963, and by her will bequeathed the house and surrounding one acre, more or less, to her son, F. Anson Ball.⁴
